PREFACE

The research undertaken for this document was based on the bottles and embossed bottle glass fragments located during archaeological excavation conducted at the Old Ford Plant site on the Alexandria waterfront in northern Virginia.

Research focused on brewers, bottlers and dairies operating in the metropolitan Washington area from the second half of the nineteenth century until World War II. This document lists businesses alphabetically by region. One chapter lists bottling and brewing companies by address, which provides a useful resource tool for archaeologists establishing predictive models. There is also a chapter which lists terminus post quem dates for bottle manufacturing technology.

City Directories for Washington, D.C. and Alexandria were studied in five year increments. Businesses with known specific dates were also researched. Only preliminary research was undertaken on Maryland brewers and bottlers, but further work is anticipated. In addition newspaper articles and local literature were reviewed. Also, bottle clubs in the region were contacted, the names and addresses of which are listed in Section 6. Libraries and archive centers where thorough research was undertaken were: the Lloyd House, Alexandria; Columbia Historical Society/The Historical Society of Washington, and Martin Luther King Library, Washingtoniana Room, Washington, D.C.; Arlington County Library, Virginiana Room, Virginia. Some preliminary research was also conducted at the Hyattsville Library, Maryland.

As more archaeological work is conducted in the metropolitan Washington area, Engineering-Science, Inc. plans to continue research on the bottlers and brewers of this area, in order to expand the information available to archaeologists excavating historical sites in this region. This research will focus on the development of makers marks on individual bottles, trace the historical development of each bottling company, and discover more about the businesses of Maryland.
