survived underground. "Ilic Fort's descendants retain a strict moral code, and emphasize education. Theological Seminary and Episcopal High School on The place received its name from "The Fort's location on Alexandria honors this enduring African American legacy. American presence declined from view. Yet "The Fort through these associations, faith, adherence to a fragments of household items, and numerous graves endures. "The remains of its homes and school/chapel, for enslaved African Americans. Ironically, "The Fort results of the Civil War — freedom, rights, and opportunities. People were displaced, buildings demolished, and graves lost before the African Civil War to Civil Rights.

New generations of the Civil War Centennial in 1964. People looked out for their neighborhood and the people remembered that we always had a nice neighborhood and the people looked out for each other. Just like us, we had gardens at every home; some people had these gardens and livestock, chickens, and if they were not, you thought they were. There was happiness and carefree despite the happenings of the Civil War. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family. Civil War to Constitution broads. Growing up in my beloved Seminary was like a natural for us. As children, we grew up with great big house. Everyone was family. Everyone was a part of the family.