Speakers

Jonathan Rak, attorney, representing the applicant.

Michael Hobbs, representing the Old Town Civic Association, spoke against and indicated that the project has positive qualities and that there is a need for affordable senior housing, but that the site has a very important history and the project should be located someplace else, as indicated in the letter from the Old Town Civic Association.

Reverend Lee Earl, representing Shiloh Baptist Church, spoke in favor and stated that the applicant has an association with Shiloh Baptist Church, and that the church has strong ties to the history of the site. He stated that the church has worked to create affordable housing and has revised the project to try to address the concerns raised by the City and neighbors, and that the proposal requests only 3 units more than would be allowed under current zoning.

Mark Duarte, representing Shiloh Baptist Church, spoke in favor and stated that affordable housing is a critical need in the community, and that prospective tenants of the proposed building have few other housing options.

Barbara Ferguson, 112 Normandy Hill Drive, spoke in favor and stated that senior housing is needed in the community, and not enough has been built.

Nancy Carson, Co-Chair of Housing Action, spoke in favor and stated that the applicant had worked hard to make the project work. She stated that it is a small project, with 8 one-bedroom units. She stated that the community needs to stop saying that affordable housing is needed and to actually provide it.

Russell George, 220 South West Street, spoke against and indicated that he supports affordable housing in the neighborhood, but stated that the site is one of the most historically significant in the country, and that development of the site should not be allowed. He asked that the item be deferred so that the issue could be resolved.

Mable Lyles spoke in favor and stated that Shiloh Baptist Church has owned the building since the 1950s, and that the building was previously used to house African American families. She stated that the project was named for Reverend Beasley, who served Shiloh for 37 years.

Kim Van Horn, 1310 Prince Street, spoke against and stated that parking is the issue, as on-street parking is very limited. She stated that 8 units and up to 16 residents are too much for the property, and that the project would not be approved if it was a commercial venture.

Dorothy Scott, 300 Wythe Street, spoke in favor and stated that she is 82, and that affordable elderly housing is needed for the younger generation.

Muriel Garr, representing Financial Community Development Firms, spoke in favor of the petition and stated that affordable housing is needed, and people should not be pushed out of the community because they cannot afford to live here.

Lilliam Patterson, 1034 Woods Place, spoke in favor and stated that affordable elderly housing is needed if the community is going to continue to have a diversity of ages and incomes.

Charles Nelson, 600 South Payne Street, spoke in favor and stated that he has always lived in the area, and that the poor are continually being pushed out of the neighborhood.

Anderson Grimsley, 3800 Candlelight Court, spoke in favor and stated that approving the project is the right thing to do, that affordable housing is important, and that this property is the right location for affordable housing in part because it is available.

Tyree Anderson, 8569 Southlawn Court, spoke in favor and stated that if Alexandria is to be unified, then Alexandria must say yes to affordable housing.

Gregg Nelson, 228 South West Street, spoke against and stated that his house overlooks the property, and he is concerned that he will be overlooking trash cans and a parking lot.

Jimmie Melton, 105 Harvard Street, spoke in favor and stated that he had circulated a petition supporting the project, and that 90 of the signatures on the petition were from people in the nearby area. He stated that there are neighbors that are in support of the proposal, and that a retirement home is preferable to a retail or office building.

H. Alan Young, 1301 Duke Street, spoke against and indicated that he supports affordable housing in his neighborhood, but the site that has been selected is inappropriate. He stated that the project should be located on the south side of West Street or on Shiloh's parking lot on the west side of the church.

Martha Pashcal, representing the Alexandria Housing Development Corporation, spoke in support and stated that affordable housing is needed and is the highest unmet need in the City, and that the proposal has addressed neighborhood concerns.

Sharon Bob Young, 1301 Duke Street, spoke against and stated that the City has not been willing to work with the surrounding residents, and that affordable housing is needed, but not at this location. She stated that other housing in the area could be used for affordable housing, and that this area does not have enough parks or open space. She stated that the parking that is proposed for this site is not adequate.

Paul Glist, Co-President of the Alexandria Interfaith Association, spoke in favor and stated that the provision of affordable housing is a moral imperative, and that pricing seniors out of the community would result in the city losing its human history. He stated that Alexandria cannot afford to become a community only for those with means.

Pamela Barr, 221 South West Street, spoke against and stated that she applauds the goals of the project and the donation of the land, but she is concerned with the spot zoning, the density, and the small size of the apartments. She also stated that ongoing construction has created a rat problem in the neighborhood, and this will be exacerbated by allowing additional construction.

Stephanie Ropenen, representing the Alexandria Commission on Aging, spoke in favor of the petition. She stated that affordable housing is a key issue, and while 8 units may not sound like much, they are important to the 8 future tenants. She stated that we should honor senior citizens by providing for them.

Vicki Cutwright, 222 South West Street, spoke against and stated that he is not against affordable housing in the neighborhood, but that the concerns of the neighbors have not been addressed. She would support using the existing building for affordable housing, but does not support adding on to the building and changing the historic fabric. She indicated that the area should be preserved, and asked that the site's history not be discounted. She stated that future occupants of the building need not be Alexandria residents – they can live or work in Alexandria.

Harvey Gray, 1501 Princess Street, spoke in favor and stated that the City has long talked about providing affordable housing, but has always had trouble finding land. He stated that the City should not pass up on an opportunity to use available land for affordable housing.

Jane Gardner, 211 South West Street, spoke against and stated that she supports using the existing building for affordable housing, but believes that too many units are proposed and doesn't support rezoning the property changing the historic structure. She stated that the impact of the project on the neighborhood is too great.

Lee Weber, of the Affordable Housing Advisory Committee, spoke in favor and stated that most developments in Alexandria have 5% or fewer affordable units, while the proposed development provides 100% affordable units. He stated that the applicant has worked to address the concerns that had been expressed regarding open space, parking, architecture, and site history.

Paul Thompson, 211 North Payne Street, spoke against and stated that he supports the project in concept, but does not believe that the execution of the proposal is appropriate or that the neighbors are being protected. He expressed concerns regarding open space, parking, and the fabric of the neighborhood. However, he stated that if the project is approved, the conditions should be amended to restrict availability solely to residents of Alexandria, rather than to both residents and employees in Alexandria.

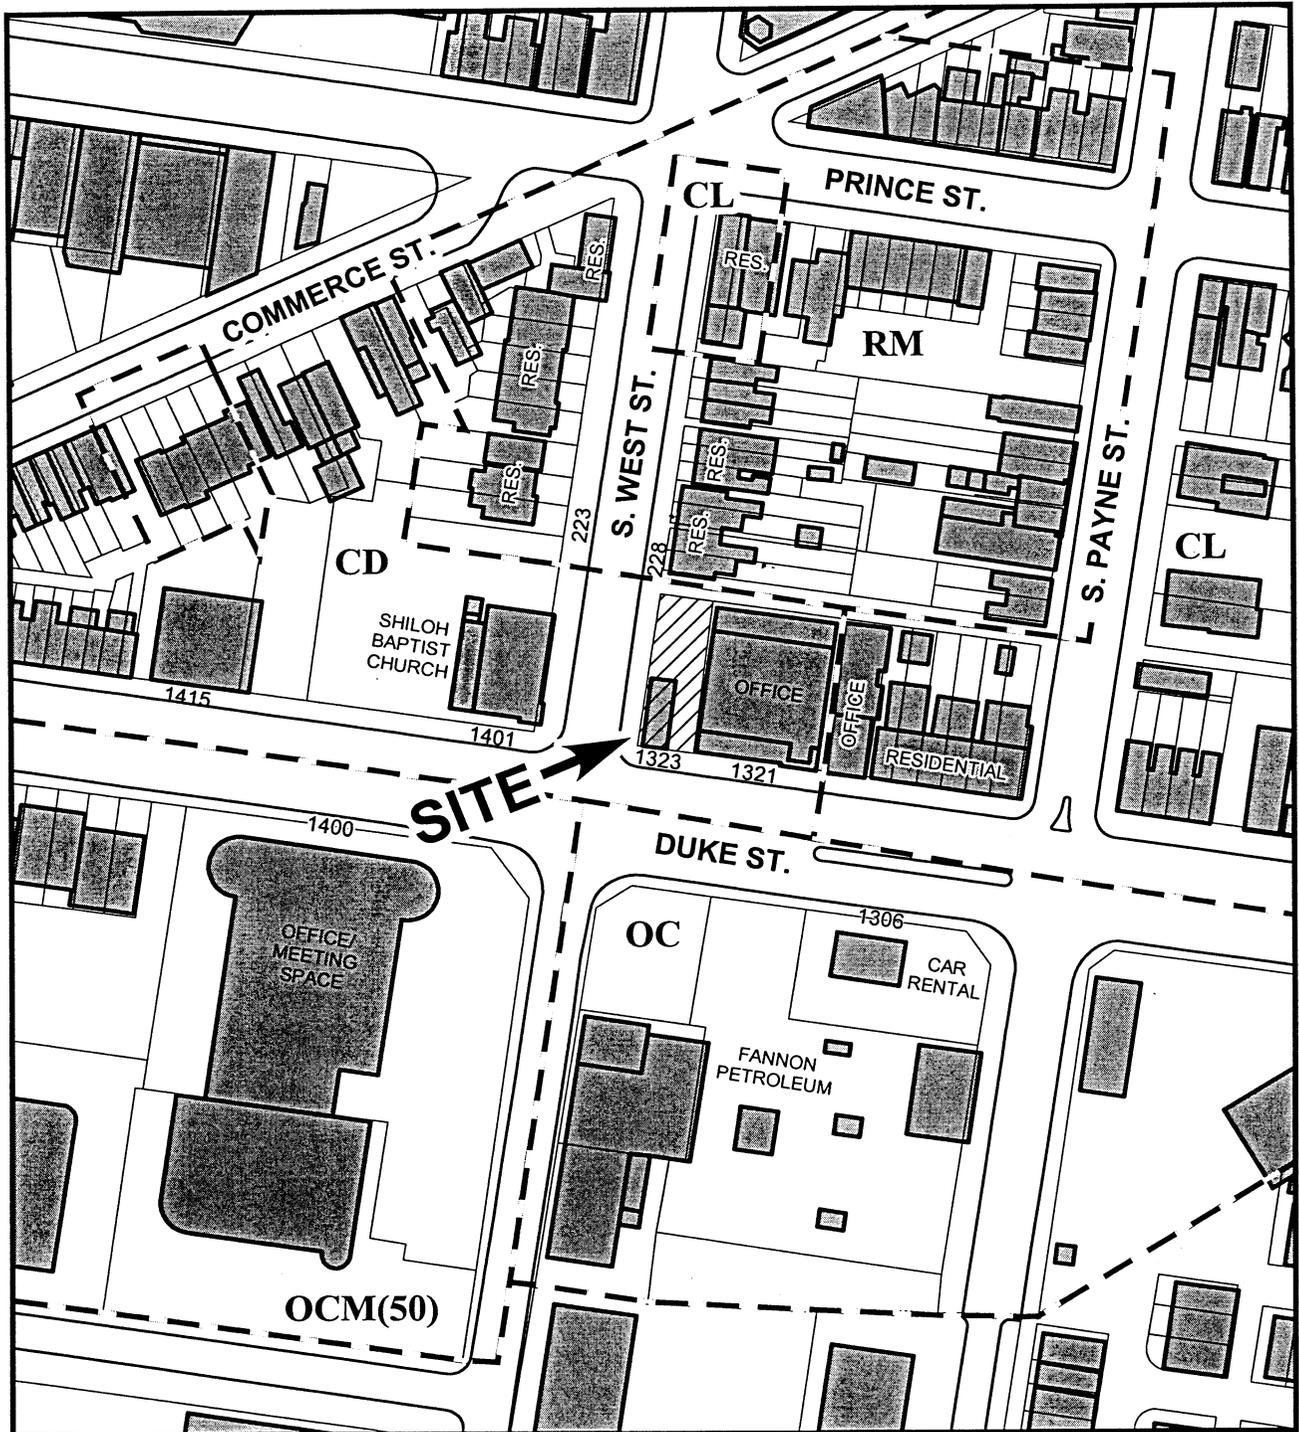

Jim Hoben, Co-Chair of Housing Action, spoke in favor and stated that great efforts had been made to get the project to fit into the neighborhood, and that partnerships are needed to make housing affordable. He stated that if the City is not willing to put affordable housing into neighborhoods where there is opposition, then the City will not be able to put affordable housing anywhere.

John Fonte, 205 South West Street, spoke against and presented a map depicting the area within 300 feet of the property, and indicated the locations of people that had signed a petition opposing the proposal. He stated that the petition has been signed by over 250 people. He stated that he supports providing affordable housing in the existing building, but is opposed to the proposed addition. He stated that the site is inappropriate, as it has too many units, as not enough parking is provided, and as non-Alexandria residents could live there.

A Michael Millel, 3928 Colonel Ellis Avenue, spoke in favor and stated that the Housing Authority has battled for affordable housing, and the 8 proposed units are important. He stated that affordable housing must be located where the opportunity presents itself. He stated that the Housing Authority's other affordable elderly housing developments indicate that the parking demand for such developments is very low - a 170-unit building has only 37 parking spaces and a 90-unit building has only 17 parking spaces, and both developments always have parking spaces available. He stated that low-income elderly rarely have cars.

Ellen Pickering, 103 Roberts Lane, spoke against and stated that she supports the retention of the existing historic building, but that Shiloh Baptist Church has other land that would be better suited for affordable housing. She stated that she was pleased with the maximum income levels for the development, but believes that the property is too small for the proposal.

Carolyn Harvey, representing Harambee C.E.D.C., spoke in favor and stated that the project will help to address the need for affordable elderly housing, and stated that the petition supporting the proposed development was signed by 342 people.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Staff recommends approval of the master plan amendment, pursuant to the attached resolution.

Staff recommends approval of the rezoning request for a map amendment.

I. BACKGROUND

The applicant, requests approval to change the zoning of a 3,500 sq. ft. parcel of land at the northeast corner of Duke Street and West Street from CD Commercial Downtown to CRMU/L Commercial Residential Mixed Use (Low) with a proffer to the proposed site plan and use. The applicant also requests approval to amend the Old Town Small Area Plan to redesignate the property from CD Commercial Downtown to CRMU/L Commercial Residential Mixed Use (Low). The amendment requests are associated with a proposal to construct an 8-unit senior affordable housing facility for the site as discussed in the accompanying DSUP #2004-0015 staff report.

A. Land Parcel

The 3,500 sq.ft. site has 35 ft. of frontage on Duke Street, 100 ft. of frontage on West Street, and a lot area of 3,500 sq. ft. It is also served by an alley, which runs from West Street to Payne Street and abuts the north line of the property. The site is improved with a 1,450 sq. ft., two story principal building and a 290 sq. ft., two story outbuilding.

B. Land Use Context

Uses surrounding the site are mixed and include residential, commercial, and institutional uses. A large office building is directly adjacent to the east, and additional office uses predominate along Duke Street to the east and the west. Across Duke Street to the south, there are additional office uses, as well as the Fannon properties, a car rental agency and the Old Town Village residential townhouse and condominium development. Immediately to the west of the site is the Shiloh Baptist Church, and it occupies a large portion of the commercial property across Duke Street at 1400 Duke Street. To the north, there are residential townhouses along West Street.

In addition to the uses in the area, the zoning is also mixed. Properties to the west, including the Shiloh Baptist Church property, are zoned CD Commercial Downtown. The adjacent property to the east is also zoned CD, but beyond that is a large area of CL/Commercial Low zoning. The townhouses to the north are zoned RM/Townhouse. There are additional areas of RB residential zoning nearby. Across the street, there are a variety of commercial and residential zoning areas: the 1400 Duke Street building and the area to the west of it are zoned OCM (150); the Fannon properties are zoned OC. The large area that includes the Old Town Village townhouses and condominiums is zoned CRMU/L.

II. STAFF ANALYSIS

A. Comparison of the Existing and Proposed Zoning:

The applicant is requesting a change to the land use designation and zoning for the subject property from CD Commercial Downtown to CRMU/L Commercial Residential Mixed Use (Low) in order to construct a building addition and to create a housing option for the elderly with the creation of affordable units. Staff finds the proposed rezoning supportable because:

- the development rights in both zones are balanced: what is being gained in CRMU/L comes with a relinquishment of development rights in CD;
- what would likely be developed or is permitted on the site under CD zoning is not as desirable as the proposed use, and could have a greater impact on the neighbors than the proposed building; and
- the CD zone lacks the flexibility necessary to achieve affordable housing options.

Balance of development rights in each zone.

The proposed CRMU/L zone is actually more restrictive than the CD zone in terms of land uses and FAR (volume of building permitted), but it is requested in this case because it is less restrictive in terms of density/units per acre. The height would remain the current zone and proposed zone. The size or volume of the building permitted within the current CD zoning (2.5 FAR) is less than the proposed CRMU-L zone (1.5 FAR). Therefore, two elements of compatibility ( height and building volume) of the proposed zone will be equal or less than the current and adjoining zoning.

By rezoning the property to CRMU/L, the applicant will be relinquishing some flexibility in terms of allowable land use and will be restricted to a smaller building than would be possible with CD zoning, in exchange for additional flexibility in terms of the number of dwelling units allowed. The CRMU/L zone is also less restrictive in terms of building setbacks, but that is consistent with the development pattern in the neighborhood, where most buildings are constructed to the property line. While the proposed CRMU-L zone does not have a limit on density, the applicant has proffered to the proposed development plan.

A comparison of the two zones is presented in the following table:

COMPARISON OF CD AND CRMU/L ZONES
Regulation	CD Zone	CRMU/L Zone
Permitted Uses	16 categories of residential, commercial and institutional uses.	10 categories of residential and commercial uses.
Special Uses	27 categories of residential, commercial and institutional uses.	14 categories of residential, commercial and institutional uses.
Lot Area	Nonresidential: N/A SFR, 2FR, TH: 1,452 sf./du Multifamily: 1,245 sf./du; 800 sf. / du w/ SUP	All uses: N/A
Lot Frontage	Nonresidential: N/A SFR, 2FR: 25' Townhouses: 18' Multifamily: 50'	All uses: N/A
Front Yard	0'	0'
Side Yards	Nonresidential: N/A SFR, 2FR, TH: 5' Multifamily: 25'	All uses: N/A
Open space:	Nonresidential: N/A Residential: 40%	Nonresidential: N/A Residential: 40%
Floor Area Ratio (FAR)	Nonresidential: 1.5; 2.5 w/ SUP SFR, 2FR, TH: 1.5 Multifamily: 1.25	Nonresidential: 0.75 Residential: 1.0, 1.5 w/ SUP Mixed Use: 1.0, 1.5 w/ SUP
Accessory Apartments	Up to 4; 1 parking space (on- or off-site) required per unit	Up to 2; 1.3 on-site parking spaces req'd per 1-bdrm; 1.75 per 2-bdrm

Comparing the existing CD zoning with the proposed CRMU/L zoning without taking the applicant's proposal into consideration, the development rights that would be gained with the rezoning balance well with those that would be given up. The CRMU/L zone is less restrictive in terms of allowable residential density, but the actual impact of potentially higher densities is offset by more restrictive FARs. If the applicant's proposal is taken into consideration, then the applicant is increasing the number of units that can be provided on the site, but is building with a lower FAR and with a less intensive use in terms of parking need. Since the rezoning will be governed by a proffer, the applicant will actually be giving up all flexibility and building volume in exchange for the increased number of units.

Other potential uses of the property under CD zoning.

Were the property with its CD zoning to be sold to a for-profit developer, there are three likely development scenarios that would occur.

Commercial use.

A building of the exact size as the one proposed by Harambee could be built without a rezoning or master plan amendment, and without a requirement to supply any parking or open space under the CD zone, if the property is used for commercial use. The prospect is likely because the CD zone allows the building to be used for offices, for any type of retail establishment, or for personal services uses, such as hair salons, dry cleaners, or repair businesses. There are several office buildings in the area along Duke Street, of varying sizes. By eliminating the open space requirement and eliminating the parking requirement, the developer would have added flexibility which would make it easier to work around the existing building. The building could be expanded under CD to include more structure to the east as well as additional building to the rear. With an SUP, a 2.5 FAR would be possible.

Commercial ground floor use, with apartments upstairs.

Another option would be similar to the commercial use described above, but with apartments on the second floor of the existing building, and possibly the second and third floor of the new building addition next door. Under this scenario, the building could be expanded as above, but, again, no open space would be required. Parking at a ratio of one space per apartment would be required and could be provided on-site or off-site.

Two residential townhouses, with building additions, required parking and open space.

The existing building could be converted to a residence, and a second dwelling, a three to four story townhouse, could be constructed on the east half of the property. Under this option, the applicant would be required to subdivide the property, to provide parking and to preserve 40% of each site as open space (the parking spaces count as open space in the existing CD zone).

Although the two-townhouse option would create a less intense use than the one proposed, either of the two commercial scenarios would be more intense and would create greater negative impacts for the neighborhood. The Harambee proposal also provides much greater public benefit, with its provision of affordable housing for the elderly. With a commercial alternative there is potential for either a high turnover retail use, or a dense office building which could mean much more activity at and near the site in the future than would be the case with eight elderly apartments.

In addition, the commercial options are likely to create significant parking problems for the area. The site is exempted from providing parking for commercial uses because it is located in the Central Business District, but that does not mean that commercial uses as a practical matter would not generate parking demand. Under the parking requirements applicable outside the CBD, a 5,250 sq. ft. office building (1.5 FAR) would generate a need for 9 parking spaces and a 5,250 sq. ft. retail building would need 21 spaces. A building with commercial uses on the ground floor and commercial apartments above could need up to 16 spaces. Increasing the FAR to 2.5 via an SUP would create a need for 15 spaces for an office use, up to 26 spaces for a retail building with commercial apartments, and 33 spaces for a retail building. By comparison, the proposed 8-unit home for the elderly requires two parking spaces, though the applicant has committed to providing one space per unit (8 spaces), with 3 on-site and the remainder on the adjoining surface parking lot.

CD Zoning lacks the flexibility necessary for affordable housing.

The CD zone provides for a relatively high FAR for both residential and commercial uses, allowing large buildings. It also allows for apartment buildings, homes for the elderly and congregate housing. However, the lot size requirements, which translate into an allowable number of units per acre, are very low. Thus, the ability to provide for multi-family uses, congregate housing and other forms of multiple unit housing forms, while listed, is allowed in theory only, unless the applicant has a large piece of land and envisions a very large building, which would probably not be well received. While at one time, this anomaly may not have produced a problem, with the high price of land, the resulting narrowing of land options, and the increasing need for affordable housing, it creates, as a practical matter, a disincentive for property owners and developers who wish to pursue affordable housing in Old Town. The applicant has found a property that is available, and proposed a development that uses the land with a scale of building and a design that is suitable to the neighborhood.

It will be difficult if not impossible to achieve affordable housing on this site without a rezoning. Comparing the two zones and their development potentials shows a balance between the zones, in terms of development rights, and also shows that the proposed zone is likely to bring less impacts from development on this site than the existing one.

B. Compatibility of Proposed Proffered Zoning with Surrounding Uses and Development Pattern.

This application is for a Master Plan amendment and rezoning, but it also includes a proffer, thus restricting the future use of the site to the specific development described. Thus, the full range of uses and development permitted by the CRMU/L zone are not actually the issue here. Rather, it is the proposed development and the number of units. Only the development and use proposed can be built if the Harambee applications are approved. Staff has analyzed the actual development proposal as part of its zoning analysis.

The staff report for DSUP #2004-0015 describes the development proposal in detail, and, as discussed in that report, staff finds the proposal to be consistent and compatible with both the uses and the development scale of the surrounding area. Staff believes that it will be compatible with the mass and scale of the surrounding area and to the community in general, and that its potential impacts, if any, will be minimal.

The subject property is located in an area that includes a wide range of uses and zones. There are very dense commercial and hotel developments to the west along Duke Street; there are lower density residential areas to the immediate north, and in the Southwest Quadrant neighborhood to the south. Additional development along Duke Street can be anticipated in the future. This particular area of the City along Duke Street is a true mixed use area, where commercial and residential uses exist side by side and acts as a transition between Old Town to the east and north and the newer development areas to the south and west. The subject property is important to the area and is located at the first corner entrance to the Old and Historic Alexandria District.

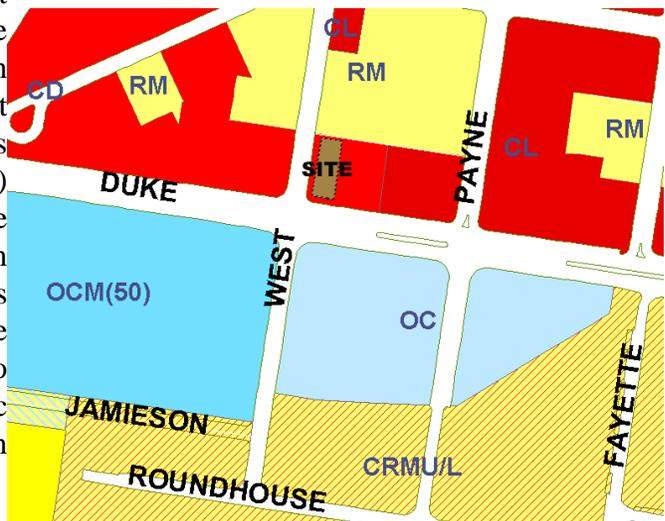

Staff finds both the proposed use and the proposed zone to be suitable for this particular location.

The proposed 8-unit residential building is appropriate because it provides a suitable transition between the lower density residential to the north and the commercial and higher density residential uses to the south, across Duke Street. The zone, CRMU/L, has been used in the past in this area to provide flexibility for new development. When the Old Town Village development approached the City several years ago, and the Master Plan amendment and rezoning for residential townhouses and condominiums were supported in this transitional area.

The proposed residential building is not dissimilar in that it too seeks the flexibility of the CRMU/L zone.

C. Spot Zoning Issue

The rezoning requested here would map the corner property at Duke and West Streets as CRMU/L with proffers. Because the adjacent properties do not have CRMU/L zoning, some opponents to the proposal claim that it is an example of illegal spot zoning. Illegal spot zoning occurs when a single piece of land is zoned differently from the uniform zone(s) surrounding it, coupled with an effort to single out a piece of land and treat it differently from others, contrary to announced planning policies of the City and for the economic benefit of the owner. Spot zoning confers special benefits to an individual at the expense of the public generally. The current proposal is not an example of spot zoning.

Under Virginia law, courts have not found rezonings similar to this application to constitute illegal spot zoning. Giving deference to local legislative bodies, courts have upheld the rezoning of individual properties, as long as the zoning does not confer a private benefit at the expense of public policies. Rezonings are not common in Alexandria, and staff does not support rezoning unless the proposed rezoning is consistent with established City policies and there is a clear public benefit.

In this case, although the properties abutting the subject property are not zoned CRMU/L, they are not zoned uniformly. The land to the west along Duke Street is zoned CD as is the parcel to the immediate east. The land to the north is zoned RM. To the east, beyond the adjacent office building, the area is zoned CL. The abutting properties across Duke Street include both OCM (50) land to the southwest and OC property to the southeast. Significantly, there is a large residential townhouse and multi-family area of CRMU/L zoned property to the south and the east (Old Town Village). The CRMU/L area is quite proximate to the subject property, and, because of the land area involved, one of the most predominant zones in the immediate area.

More importantly, the Harambee property is not being singled out for special treatment contrary to announced public policies of the City. On the contrary, providing affordable housing and retaining elderly residents are clear priorities of the City, expressly articulated in City Council's recently adopted 2004-2015 Strategic Plan. Council has for the last two years discussed affordable housing as a goal of the City. It has created a Housing Corporation to assist these efforts, has increased the developer provision of affordable housing and has directed staff to evaluate the current affordable housing policies all in an effort to implement the goals of the Strategic Plan.

In addition to the affordable housing issue, there are other significant public benefits from the proposed development. The design and materials of the proposed building are appropriate for this prominent entrance to the Historic District. It will enhance the area with its highly detailed design, carefully arranged on the site to match the surrounding buildings and uses. And the applicant has worked with the City to achieve as much open space and parking for the site as is physically and reasonably possible. Mindful of the important history of the site, the applicant will participate in archeology investigations, and memorialize the site with interpretative signage. The proposal, in staff's view, fully conforms to the City's public policies.

D. Staff Recommendation

The Harambee proposal will provide affordable residences for the elderly of the City in a portion of the City that contains a mixture of uses and zones and provides a transition among neighborhoods. The proposed zone and Master Plan designation provide flexibility, allowing more affordable housing than would otherwise be permitted. The proposal, provides significant public benefits, is restricted by a proffer, and will not harm the surrounding area. For these reasons, staff recommends that the Master Plan amendment and rezoning be approved, subject to a proffer that restricts the development to the applicant's specific development proposal.

III. STAFF RECOMMENDATION:

Staff recommends approval of the proposed rezoning of the site from CD-Commercial Downtown to CRMU-L -Commercial Residential Mixed Use-Low with the proffer to the development site plan, limiting the use to senior affordable housing and all applicable special use permit conditions.
